

Sample Personal Statement for Master's

I've always known I had a unique fondness for youngsters and assisting others. When it came time to start my undergrad degree, I chose education because it was the only course that could integrate and cultivate those two passions. That choice, however, was not made lightly. I was an uncertain and timid young adult at the start of my college years, learning more about myself every day. But I knew I was in the proper place the moment I walked into my first education class. During my first encounter with students, I became even more convinced that this was the field for me. I had found my niche and over time developed into a self-assured, upbeat educator.

Currently I am working as a teacher at Dreams High School. I teach classes IX and also coach the high school football team. I am privileged to have been acknowledged by the learners and supervisors in this institution, and I value the pupils I have had who look to me for instructional and personal support. When a kid comes to me with a worry about anything going on in his/her career, I love to offer my help and put his/her mind at ease. As a teacher, I believe that I am responsible for nurturing and guiding every single student of mine. I wish to provide my tutees an opportunity to realize their full potential and thereby build a successful career. I have always approached teaching from a humanitarian angle rather than a career centric one. It is my conviction that the purpose of education is to provide young children the tools to navigate the society that they are a part of.

My personal life has had a great impact on my professional career and the kind of teacher I wanted to become. Although I was born and brought up in a healthy family environment, my parents decided to get divorced while I was in high school. Shortly after my father was diagnosed with blood cancer and passed away by the time I completed my intermediaries. I had to depend a lot on my teachers for emotional and mental support. I was fortunate to have a group of educators who were there for me when I needed them the most. I am still grateful to my tutors for their encouragement and assistance throughout those difficult times. My English teacher was one of these professors whom I very specifically remember. She not only gave me the confidence to deal with difficult problems, but she also transformed me into a voracious reader. I have been trying to copy her teaching methods and incorporate them into my arsenal. It's fair to say that she is my role model and the beacon of light that made me who I am today.

Recently I have realized that my knowledge base and teaching methods require a few tweaks. I wish to become an even better educator than I currently am and the best possible way to achieve this objective is by pursuing my master's in Education. This would be a great opportunity to learn about the current trends and developments in the field of education. I am sure that the program offered at University of Essex, UK would meet all my requirements. The M.Ed program is a one-of-a-kind course that allows educators, instructors, and mentors from all walks of life to reflect on how they instruct and grow their profession in new ways. This up-to-date course examines technology-oriented teaching methodologies and how it might improve practise. I will learn about some fundamental philosophical notions in teaching as well as the cultural framework that has shaped modern pedagogical ideologies. The goal of the program is to help candidates become more reflective and skilled teachers. I was greatly impressed with the curriculum and subjects such as Introduction to Learning Analytics, Research Methods in Teaching and Learning, and Philosophy of Education and Theories.

I wish to help my students become better citizens and professionals and I believe that the M.Ed program at University of Essex would certainly assist me in achieving this goal.
